

FY 2025

Lottery Sales and Revenues

In an industry based on chance, the luck of the draw was perhaps the biggest story of lotteries' FY 2025 sales and revenue performance.

General notes: All figures should be considered preliminary and unaudited. Lotto games include all lotto-style games other than those specifically identified. Add-on games are generally included with the host game sales; exceptions are if a game is available on several base games, then it is included in the "other" category. Internet sales of draw games, where applicable, are included in the relevant draw game categories. Because we have standardized instants and sports betting as net revenue after prizes, the total "sales" for some jurisdictions may differ from that reported in annual financial statements. The net revenue may be before or after promotions. Revenues to beneficiaries may reflect either actual fiscal year transfers or net income available for distribution; includes revenue from gaming operations where applicable and itemized funding of state problem gambling programs.

Specific notes: (1) When implemented as a monitor game complement to Keno, Cash Pop is included in the monitor game "Others" column (Kentucky, New Jersey and West Virginia). (2) iLottery instant games are standardized across jurisdictions as gross play less prizes won. In some jurisdictions, the net figure shown may also be after bonuses. (3) Massachusetts and Rhode Island do not separate sales of 3- and 4-digit daily numbers games. (4) North Carolina and Virginia serve as regulators (not operators) for casino and/or sports betting, and those revenues are included here. (5) Wisconsin transfers to beneficiaries include $83.865 million received from the state's General Fund and passed through.

General notes: All figures should be considered preliminary and unaudited. Lotto games include all lotto-style games other than those specifically identified. Add-on games are generally included with the host game sales; exceptions are if a game is available on several base games, then it is included in the "other" category. Internet sales of draw games, where applicable, are included in the relevant draw game categories. Because we have standardized elstants and sports betting as net revenue after prizes, the total "sales" for some jurisdictions may differ from that reported in annual financial statements. The net revenue may be before or after promotions. Revenues to beneficiaries may reflect either actual fiscal year transfers or net income available for distribution; includes revenue from gaming operations where applicable and itemized funding of state problem gambling programs.

Specific notes: (1) When implemented as a monitor game complement to Keno, Cash Pop is included in the monitor game "Others" column (Kentucky, New Jersey and West Virginia). (2) iLottery elstant games are standardized across jurisdictions as gross play less prizes won. In some jurisdictions, the net figure shown may also be after bonuses. (3) Massachusetts and Rhode Island do not separate sales of 3- and 4-digit daily numbers games. (4) North Carolina and Virginia serve as regulators (not operators) for casino and/or sports betting, and those revenues are included here. (5) Wisconsin transfers to beneficiaries include $83.865 million received from the state's General Fund and passed through.

Ontario net to government doesn't include the contribution from online lottery sales, as online operations are consolidated.

* Québec reports only net revenue (gross gaming revenue) for all products. Instants include certain draw games with instant-win features. Sports betting and VLT revenues are now reported in broader categories that include other products, and are therefore not included here; proceeds to beneficiaries include only revenues from traditional lottery operations.
